U. S. TREASURY FOR WITH PROSECUTION, LOSS OF SALES UNLESS HE ABLES BY CODE

McUTCHEON'S SON INDICTED IN PROBE OF 2D WARD RACE

Howard McCutcheon Jr.
"Procured Four Persons
To Register and Vote Illegally," Is Charge.
Bench Warrant Issued.

JURY'S TRUE BILL CONTAINS 6 COUNTS

Carmichael, Donovan
Tell Probers Ex-Council-man's Son Persuaded Them To Register.

Charging that Howard McCutcheon Jr., son of the successful candidate for council from the second ward in the September 20 primary, "procured four persons to register and vote illegally," the Fulton county grand jury Friday afternoon indicted him on six counts and his bond was fixed at $1,500. A bench warrant issued for his arrest had not been served late Friday afternoon.

McCutcheon, who is 28 years of age and connected with his father in the operation of a printing plant, was charged with inducing C. P. Shields, 39, who resides in the Lakewood section, to register and vote as a second ward citizen.

Other counts charge that McCutcheon induced Mrs. W. M. Carmichael, who resides at 1151 Oxford road, beyond the city limits, to register and vote, and persuaded Carmichael and Donovan to register. The latter two do not reside in the second ward and did not vote.

In registering, all four gave their address as 223 Garrett street, a place of business operated by Carmichael, and where Shields and Donovan are employed. Mr. and Mrs. Carmichael and Donovan were indicted a day or two ago for illegal registering and voting.

Three Appear Before Jury.
The Carmichaels and Donovan testified before the grand jury Friday and later Mr. and Mrs. Carmichael gave out a joint statement saying that young McCutcheon had approached them and persuaded them to register, saying "you have a legal right to vote because you operate a business in the second ward." Mr. Carmichael said that he later learned that he was not eligible to vote and did not. His wife said she voted after McCutcheon visited her six times on election day and finally persuaded her to go with him to the polls in the second ward.

Mrs. Carmichael said she had no intention of wrong-doing and "only went with the young man to get rid of him."

She said that when she approached the ballot box in precinct A that she asked a clerk if she could vote, and that the clerk replied "if you were eligible to vote your name would not appear on this registration list." She said she did not know the name of the clerk who gave her that information.

Carmichael said he learned after he registered that he was not eligible to vote and that when McCutcheon came for him on election day to take him to the polls that he refused to go.

The grand jury investigation grew out of charges that Howard McCutcheon Sr., was elected by a one-vote majority for council of the second ward.

Woman's Hand Found In Package by Road

NAHUNTA, Ga., Oct. 27.—(AP)—Officers of Brantley and surrounding counties today were looking for parts of a human body after citizens of Waynesville, a town 11 miles east of here, found a woman's hand wrapped in a package beside the highway.

Brantley county officers expressed the opinion a woman had been slain and her body thrown along the highway after being cut in pieces.

One finger was missing from the hand found near Waynesville, and the other fingers were mutilated. Officers said no woman had been reported missing in this vicinity.

GRAND JURY RAPS APATHY OF VOTERS IN CITY ELECTIONS

Municipal Employees in Position of Control
Rather Than Citizens,
Declare Presentments.

Declaring that city employees are now in position to control the entire results of most elections, the Fulton county grand jury Friday returned special presentments criticizing the apathy of the white voters of Atlanta who failed to take advantage of their rights to cast a ballot.

The special presentments came after a series of indictments of persons on charges of fraudulent voting and registrations. The presentment gave several figures to bolster the claim of the jurors.

The presentments hold that although Atlanta has a white voting population of 116,075 within the city limits, that only 14,246 cast a vote in the last primary on September 20. But last on that statement, 102,000 citizens did not go to the polls to vote. The grand jury pointed out that similar conditions had been noticed in the past.

"We charge," said the presentment, "that 102,000 citizens who did not register and vote neglected their duty to help maintain a democratic form of government. The consequences of this neglect of duty by so many citizens may become serious."

The grand jury noted that as a result of "control of city employees" the following resulted:

There are 3,000 white employees of the city eligible to vote and of this number 1,832 voted in the September 20 primary, or 60 per cent of registered city employees. The presentments said further that the grand jurors were led to believe that each of such employees had control or influence three or more voters.

In conclusion the presentment said that the jurors deemed it their duty to call "to the attention of the government and the public any failure on the part of those responsible for the operation of the government to assume the responsibility with which they are charged."

20 Highway Projects To Be Awarded Nov. 22

Contracts for 20 highway projects approved by the federal government, totaling between $100,000 and $1,500,000, will be awarded on November 22, it was learned Friday at the highway department.

The list was not yet available at the department, but it is understood to include several large bridges and four or five paving projects.

Chairman J. J. Mangham, who was in Rome Friday, announced some time ago that projects would be let just as soon as they are approved by the government and that the highway board would require construction work to start within seven days after bids are accepted.

Projects already advertised for letting of contracts on November 7 aggregate $850,000. All of the state's $10,000,000 road-building program is expected to be under contract before the end of the year.

Roosevelt May Hike Public Works Funds

WASHINGTON, Oct. 27.—(AP)—President Roosevelt is seriously contemplating asking congress for additional public works funds above the $3,300,000,000 program now in operation.

Pending a decision on the amount of additional public works to be sanctioned, President Roosevelt is deferring completion of his fiscal program for the ensuing year.

He expects a report next week from the special committee investigating proposed taxes on liquor after repeal.

Higher Prices Seen On Cigars, Cigarettes

NEW YORK, Oct. 27.—(AP)—Increased retail prices for cigarettes and cigars in line with advances in other commodities are forecast shortly by close observers of the tobacco industry.

That an increase has been contemplated since midsummer is admitted on all sides. Action has been delayed, first by formulation of a code for the industry, which opened the way for a moderate increase, then by uncertainties as to the processing taxes, and finally, by the marketing agreement signed on October 12.

MARKET POLICIES OF WIGGIN RAPPED BY HIS SUCCESSOR

Aldrich Denounces Chase Affiliates' Trading in Stocks of Parent Bank.
Heavy Profits Revealed.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 27.—(AP)—Market trading policies of Albert H. Wiggin, for years at the helm of the $2,000,000,000 Chase National bank, were repudiated today before the senate banking committee by Winthrop W. Aldrich, his recent successor as head of the financial house.

Aldrich surprised the committee and spectators, along with Chase officials seated about him, by a brisk and voluntary declaration that the bank's present management is "absolutely opposed" to affiliates trading in the bank's stock in the market.

His statement was made just after investigators had presented evidence that Wiggin's personal companies had profited upward of $10,000,000 through dealing in the bank's stock, while bank affiliates and subsidiaries were engaging in various stock pool operations.

Personal Companies.
Ferdinand Pecora, committee counsel, had just traced widespread and interwoven stock operations of Chase Securities Corporation and its subsidiary, Metropart Securities Corporation, and Wiggin's personal companies, the Sherman, the Murlin and the Clingston.

Wiggin, who ascended to leadership of the bank in 1931 and relinquished his place last January, looked on calmly while the younger Aldrich walked to the head of the committee table and volunteered to members:

"In order that there shall be no misunderstanding on the part of the present stockholders of the bank as to what the attitude of the present management of the bank is with regard to participation by the affiliates of the bank in trading accounts in bank stock, I would like to state that it is absolutely opposed to such transactions."

As a matter of fact, today the Metropart Corporation does not deal in Chase stock in any way whatever, and as long as I have anything to do with the management of the bank, Chase stock will not be an artificial one."

One of First Acts.
Aldrich, brother-in-law of John D. Rockefeller Jr., the largest stockholder of Chase bank stock, brought about the divestment of the bank and its securities affiliate last spring as one of his first acts on assuming the leadership.

Pecora brought out that while Wiggin's personal corporations showed a profit of more than $10,000,000 in the bank stock, the Chase Securities Corporation's operations yielded around $150,000, Wiggin explained there was a difference in the way they operated.

Wiggin did not challenge Pecora's statement that the banker's personal company realized a fortune. He listened to the figures unsmilingly and said he could not verify them. They were compiled by Pecora and his staff.

Profits to the personal companies were piled up in the five-year period, 1928-1932, Pecora said, tabulating them as follows:

Sherman Corporation, $5,504,333.
Murlin Corporation, $3,368,161.
Clingston Company, Inc., $4,445,000.

Pecora presented to the committee during the day evidence that the Chase securities had participated in 35 pool operations from 1928 to 1931 in addition to nine accounts in Chase bank stocks.

Numerous stocks were traded in by the pools, including Prairie Pipe Line, American Woolen, Cuban Cane Sugar Corporation, General Gas and Electric, International Paper and Power, Grinnell Corporation, Oil, Grinnell, Grinnell Company, St. Louis-San Francisco Railway, Curtis Publishing Company, Bethlehem Steel Corporation, National Steel Car Lines, International Hydro-Electric, Canada International Paper and others.

Deals in the bank stock by the securities affiliates aggregated $800,000, but purchases totaling $430,772.85, Pecora said. Sales amounted to $420,940,210 and hundreds of thousands of shares were involved.

New Fire Near Jail Speeds Jury Probe

Shortly after the Fulton county grand jury had launched an investigation into a means of "forcing the city to replace its present police station, fire broke out Thursday night near the edifice and caused further probing Friday. Ralph Pharr, assistant solicitor, were ordered to speed their report on possibilities for grand jury action.

The fire broke out in a pile of trash behind the jail and for a while prisoners and officials were frightened. Prompt work of fire companies kept the flames from spreading. The chiefs of the police and fire departments and other department heads testified before the grand jury Thursday that the police station was a "dump and a menace."

Alderman Ed A. Gilliam, chairman of council's finance committee, Alderman Frank H. Reynolds and Councilman Frank Wilson, a special council committee to attempt to evolve funds for construction of a new police station, left Atlanta Friday to inspect the new building at Jacksonville. They will return Sunday.

The committee is seeking cost data and other information in the effort to obtain a new and modern station for Atlanta at a minimum cost.

Centennial Parade at Rome Viewed by Crowd of 10,000

Speech by Talmadge Climaxes Great Celebration—Governor Calls for Defeat of Judges Who Halt Utility Rate Cuts by Injunction.

By L. A. FARRELL.
ROME, Ga., Oct. 27.—Calling upon the voters to "beat the sand" out of judges who halt utility rate reductions with restraining orders, Governor Eugene Talmadge in an address here today before nearly 10,000 persons climaxed the four-day celebration here commemorating and celebrating the 100th anniversary of the organization of Floyd county and the founding of the city of Rome.

Speaking at the county fair grounds before one of the largest crowds ever to assemble in this section of the state, the chief executive charged that the courts have been "enslaving the people" and that the public service commission which regulates the charges of public utilities and asked that the voters "get the number of the judges restraining rate cuts" and defeat them when they come up for re-election.

The address of the governor was the chief attraction of a day replete with outstanding events in the history of the county. The celebration climaxed with a gala parade depicting a flood and pagantry the city and county's 100 years of existence and its century progress. The parade, which moved up and down Broad street in order that all sections of the immense crowd could view it, was marked with pomp and splendor the like of which never before has been seen here and the efforts of the citizens of the city and county to make the day one of history brought wide approval from the governor and a number of other distinguished visitors on the reviewing stand in the heart of the city.

The governor spoke this morning after being received by city and county officials and being taken on a cruise aboard the Kong over the Etowah river.

After reviewing his conduct of office since his inauguration last January, the governor launched into a discussion of his removal of the five members of the public service commission and their replacement with his own appointees.

"Before I appointed these new members of the board," he said, "I conferred with them and learned that their views on utility rates were similar to mine, that the rate levels should be reduced. I think that between now and the next election, material rate reductions will be effected."

Then he went into his discussion of the part the courts have played in the matter, having said in previous addresses that if the present public service commission did not reduce rates he would dismiss its members and appoint a commission which would

MOVIE THEATERS TO OPEN SUNDAY

Scottish Rite Hospital
Will Get Net Proceeds
From 12 Houses.

Principal Atlanta theaters Sunday will open their doors as the city welcomes the passing of the ancient blue laws and the advent of Sunday amusements.

Alpha Fowler, president of the Atlanta Theater Managers' Association, announced that a dozen of the leading houses will open Sunday afternoon, some at 1 o'clock and some at 1:30 o'clock, and will keep open until the regular week-day closing time.

At the same time, he asserted that net proceeds from the shows will be given each Sunday to the Scottish Rite Hospital for Crippled Children, "the most worthy charity we were acquainted with during the depression," he said.

Definite details of the book-up of the children's hospital were concluded at a conference between theater managers and directors of the institution late Friday afternoon.

Under the agreement, the Fox, Grand, Georgia, Paramount, Rialto, Alpha, Empire, Tenth Street, Hilar, Buckhead, West End and Bankhead theaters are among those slated to open and begin Sunday operation.

Thomas K. Glenn, chairman of the board of directors of the hospital, Friday night praised the generosity of theater managers, which will enable the institution to resume operation at full capacity.

"We are happy to obtain funds with which to extend the usefulness of the hospital," Glenn said. "It is our confidence that much good will result from their contribution. The hospital has done a fine work. It has been restricted materially within the past few months. This additional revenue will permit us to extend help to hundreds of patients who otherwise would be forced to battle with life handicaps."

From more than 25 charities, we selected the Scottish Rite hospital to be the recipient of our net profits," Fowler said. "Even if there are any pending Floyd superior court to decide whether the state must take over such prisoners, but Rainey expressed confidence in the outcome."

The commission chairman said the hospital staff was an admirable one, both for the state and for the prisoners, but that counties in many cases were finding the gangs burdensome since all of their major roads have been graded and there is little work for the prisoners. He said there was "nothing to" stories of cruelty on the part of the guards.

GEORGIA SYSTEM OF COUNTIES HIT BY MICHIGANER

Dr. Thomas H. Reed Raps
Unwieldy Government,
Says Americans 'Acting
Like Drunken Sailors.'

"Americans, acting like a bunch of drunken sailors, have lavished money in wild enthusiasms, neglecting the essential things, and the time has come when bitter necessity demands that there be done something else than playing the fool," Dr. Thomas H. Reed, of the University of Michigan, chairman of the committee on policy of the American Political Science Association, Friday night told the Southern Political Science Association at its sixth annual session at the Piedmont hotel.

Striking at the unwieldy, cumbersome system of local governments over the nation, Dr. Reed said that "if we political scientists cannot show the public how not to play the fool, we have missed our vocation."

He gave special emphasis to the local governments of Georgia, declaring that this state "has so many counties most of the people cannot count that high."

And, he said, "that's a pretty high count."

Dr. Reed said that he was speaking as a "Yankee republican in the deep south, but that the conditions in Georgia that he referred to held equally true in his own home state of Michigan. Estimates of the number of local governments in the United States ran anywhere from 15,000 to 50,000, Americans "seeming to require so much more per square mile than any other people," Dr. Reed said.

In Michigan, he said, there are 83 counties, 1,257 townships and 6,700 school districts, with 43,000 elective local government offices exclusive of those in the cities, forming "a veritable public crib" and "a Battalion of Death to fight against local government reform."

Hits Own Legislature.
Without referring to the sad story of Georgia's local legislature, Dr. Reed told the association that the last general assembly of his state was the "worst legislative body ever assembled in the public crib" and "a Battalion of Death to fight against local government reform."

Two months ago, at the time Governor Talmadge made application for this loan in co-operation with the Georgia prison commission, the task of preparing architectural plans to submit with the application was placed in the hands of Tucker & Howell, selected as architects for the prison commission.

The details of these plans have been in the course of preparation since that time and were submitted to the public works board in Washington prior to approval of the loan. As approved by the chairman of the public works board, Secretary of the Interior Ickes and the president, work on the development can be begun at once.

The lease plan was adopted at the suggestion of Secretary Ickes, whose approval is expected within a day or two.

End of Gangs Seen.
The end of Georgia's widely criticized chain gang system was forecast Friday to follow construction of the $1,500,000 prison in Tattnall county.

Hugh Howell, chairman of the state democratic executive committee, who managed Governor Talmadge's campaign, said withdrawal of felony convicts—the backbone of the chain gangs—was the aim of the administration.

Other convicts in the gangs are short-term misdemeanors, described by Chairman E. L. Rainey, of the state prison commission, as a county responsibility. A suit now is pending in Floyd superior court to decide whether the state must take over such prisoners, but Rainey expressed confidence in the outcome.

The commission chairman said the hospital staff was an admirable one, both for the state and for the prisoners, but that counties in many cases were finding the gangs burdensome since all of their major roads have been graded and there is little work for the prisoners. He said there was "nothing to" stories of cruelty on the part of the guards.

Roosevelt Seeks Curb On Market Gyration

WASHINGTON, Oct. 27.—(AP)—President Roosevelt is inquiring closely into speculation on the stock and grain exchanges with the apparent purpose of seeking a curb on wide fluctuations.

He talked yesterday with Richard Whitney, president of the New York Stock Exchange.

He is to pay Savannah a visit in connection with the observance of the bicentennial of the state and it is expected he will stop here en route to his home at Warm Springs.

MARKET ADVANCE ACCOMPANIES HIKE IN U. S. GOLD PRICE

Federal Quotations Add
22 Cents to Metal Price and Stocks and Commodities Stage Rally.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 27.—(AP)—Under the prodding of President Roosevelt's new monetary policy, the Reconstruction Corporation's gold price was run to a new high today and officials were gratified to note that the commodity markets worked upward also.

While there were differences of opinion as to the cause of the market trend, Mr. Roosevelt's advisors noted that when led a general advance. Cotton, although quiet, followed the trend of the close and stocks followed the trend of the grain market.

The domestic price for newly mined gold was boosted today to $31.70, higher by 22 cents than yesterday and 66 cents above the day's world market quotation.

The R.E.C., which under the plan is authorized to purchase the freshly mined metal, awaited reports from mines and assay offices before announcing the total that had been acquired.

Denver dispatches told of $416,388 of new gold delivered at the mint there and tremendously increased activity among the miners. A total of 8,323 ounces was received Wednesday, said Mark Skinner, who is in charge of the mint. At that time the domestic price was $31.56. In addition, 4,390 ounces were delivered yesterday at a price of $31.54.

Studying the changes in the domestic price from day to day and their relation to the world price, observers were unable to discern any fixed pattern which would indicate that the administration was using a definite formula in arriving at the daily quotation.

Wednesday's price was $31.36, yesterday's $31.54 and today's $31.70. By comparison, the London price for the three days' were, respectively, $31.09, $31.08 and $31.10. At the same time the London figures in British currency increased steadily from 130 shillings, 9 pence, to 130 shillings, 9 pence, half penny and 131 shillings, 2 pence. Disparities in the dollar value of gold at London were caused by fluctuations in foreign exchange.

Atlanta Truck Driver Bound, Gagged, Robbed

Held up and robbed of $75 in cash and several hundred dollars in checks, an Atlanta provision company truck driver named Whitehead was bound, gagged and left lying in a ditch on the highway near Fairburn early Friday night, according to county police reports. Reeves said two negroes in a light car crowded his truck until he was forced to stop and then robbed him.

County Policemen C. T. Speer and G. C. Bentley investigated and brought Reeves to Fairburn. The negroes threw away the ignition keys of the truck before leaving him. Reeves said two white men in a car hearing of his plight drove to his truck and freed him from his bonds.

Two white men in a car hearing of his plight drove to his truck and freed him from his bonds. Bickers was held up in Marietta. Bickers was held up in Marietta.

David Scheuer, of 889 Coleman street, reported to Atlanta police Friday night that two white men dressed in light-colored suits entered his car near Fort McPherson and held him a prisoner until one of the men drove into town to Whitehead's death by six men who invaded his north side cafe. Police ascribed Damato's killing to underworld gangsters who were in the area because Damato reportedly refused to pay for gambling concessions.

JOHNSON WARNING 'GRAVE INJUSTICE' AUTO MAKER SAYS

Detroit Must Comply
With Request for Statistics, or Case Will Go to Attorney General,
NRA Chief Warns.

ROOSEVELT BACKS BARRING OF BIDS

Ford Spokesman Claims
He Is Living Up to Code and Accuses General of Being Dictatorial.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 27.—(AP)—President Roosevelt and his aids committed the government today to an effort to obtain affirmative compliance with the automobile code from Henry Ford, or go after the manufacturer with formal prosecution and exclude him and his dealers from government business.

Protests from the Ford Motor Company, combined with an assertion that it "observes the law and exceeds it in all its real recovery features" met a declaration to the press by Hugh S. Johnson, the industrial administrator, that unless the Detroit manufacturer complied with a pending request for wage and hour statistics, his case would be given the department of justice for prosecution.

The position taken by Johnson was that there had to be an end to uncertainty as to whether Ford was or was not complying; that it was impossible for the government to be taking Blue Eagles out of the windows of a beauty parlor, and at the same time allowing an industrialist of the national importance of Ford to pursue a course outside the NIRA.

No Deadline.
There is no deadline for submission of the employment statistics to the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce, which is the motor code authority, but NRA was taking steps to obtain categorical assertions from manufacturers within a week or 10 days that they do or do not intend to submit the figures. None of the big ones has yet had time to do so, and early in today's exchange of statements between Ford and Johnson there were strong unofficial intimations at Dearborn that Ford intended to turn him in.

Besides promising prosecution in case Ford failed to comply, Johnson voiced an opinion, later disclosed to be held by the president as well, that Ford was not now eligible for government contract work because of his expressions on compliance from the manufacturer which had reached Washington were negative or non-committal. The White House view was that dealers also were being barred and would get no contracts unless the controller general, responsible only to congress, interfered with the bid letting.

Former Bondsman To Capone Is Slain

WILLIAM E. McALLIE TO BE HELD TODAY

Associates Will Pay Last Honor to State Geologist for 25 Years.

Funeral services for Samuel Washington McCallie, 77, state geologist for 25 years, who died suddenly Thursday night at his residence at 3633 Fourth street, N. E., will be held at 4 o'clock this afternoon at Spring Hill. Governor Eugene Talmadge, who Friday paid high tribute to McCallie, announced that the executive offices and all departments of the state government would close during the funeral.

The funeral service will be conducted by Dr. Richard Orme Flinn, pastor of the North Avenue Presbyterian church, of which Mr. McCallie long had been a member. Pallbearers will be Lewis G. Stowers, C. Brown, William Cole Jones, C. A. Whittle, A. W. Walker, William Burckel and Edward Campbell.

Officials of the state government who had been associated with Mr. McCallie will form an honorary escort at the final rites. Interment will be in West Gate cemetery with H. M. Patterson & Son in charge.

Notwithstanding his advanced age, Mr. McCallie discharged his duties regularly and faithfully, and with an earnestness and ability that won him the esteem of all who came in contact with his important department. Governor Talmadge described him as one of the most earnest, able and conscientious workers for the state. He was at his office Thursday, and was stricken with a heart attack after he returned to his home, at about 8 o'clock.

Mr. McCallie was professor of geology in the University of Tennessee at the time he formed a connection with the Georgia geology department as assistant, in 1905. Three years later he became head of the department. He was the author of 63 scientific books and papers, and an authority on the soils and minerals and soil deposits in his adopted state. He was a native of Tennessee.

Surviving Mr. McCallie are his wife, who was Miss Elizabeth McCallie, a daughter of a prominent Savannah family; two daughters, Miss Edith McCallie, of Atlanta, and Mrs. Anna Smoots, of Dallas, Texas; a brother, Dr. J. M. McCallie, of Trenton, N. J., and several nieces and nephews.

FORD THREATENED WITH PROSECUTION

He might rule that contracts must be let to the low bidder irrespective of the NRA.

No Bargaining.

Johnson based his reasoning, he said, on a statement made to him by Edsel Ford when he was in Detroit last summer "that they would never consent to any collective bargaining."

As to dealers, said the administrator, "I have been told that a great big billion-dollar manufacturer cannot hide behind a $10,000 company."

The Ford Company shot back a statement that Johnson "has attempted a grave injustice upon a law-abiding American industry," and has "assumed to talk like a dictator and the supreme court."

"A Ford dealer, who is a citizen of Washington," the company statement went on, "entered his bid at the request of the government. His bid was something like $200,000 lower than the others."

Johnson now proposes to charge the American taxpayer a higher price in order to give government business to a concern that pays lower wages than the Ford Motor Company does. More money out of the taxpayer's pocket, less money in the taxpayer's pocket—that is the way it will work."

Roosevelt's View Revealed.

It was just after the presidential election was made known.

The issues that precipitated the declarations from both sides were two: A Ford dealer's low bid on 3,000 trucks for the civilian conservation corps was slated for rejection, and there are soon due huge army motor contracts on which Ford might bid; the Automobile Chamber of Commerce has sent out questionnaires to all motor manufacturers asking for employment figures under authority of the code. At a press conference this morning Johnson was asked whether failure by Ford to submit figures would be violation of the code. Ford was the only automobile manufacturer to refuse to sign the code.

"Absolutely," Johnson shot back, "as soon as I have a clear-cut violation of the code I will act under the code. I will turn the case over to the attorney-general's office."

Another question: "Do you consider Ford eligible to bid on government contracts at the present time, inasmuch as to date he has complied with the code?"

"No, I do not think he is eligible, because he has publicly stated that he was not in sympathy with the code and he would never put into effect anything that looked toward collective bargaining. At least he told me he would never put into effect anything that looked like collective bargaining."

"General, can the government buy from a man who conforms to the code who buys from a manufacturer who does not?"

"I have taken the position that a great big billion-dollar manufacturer cannot hide behind a $10,000 company."

Even though the dealer bought his car from any manufacturer?"

"That is right."

Another newspaperman put in: "The national labor board is of the opinion that the Ford company is going in for collective bargaining, and that the New Jersey and Pennsylvania assembly plants are waiting for word from Dearborn."

"Well, I am not familiar with the developments," was the reply.

"I saw it in the paper but I do not know when they did or how they did. That's all I know."

"Could the Lincoln company sign without the other Ford companies signing. Would that be acceptable to you?"

"Yes, I think I would have to accept it as the Lincoln company is concerned."

"Unless Mr. Ford reports his figures by November 7 he will be clearly in violation of the act?" (Johnson said he thought November 7 was the deadline.)

Not Looked Into.

"I have not looked into this to see just where the deadline is, the requirement is that the manufacturer should furnish figures to the chamber, and I have been watching because I knew I would be face to face with the situation as soon as reports were called for. They have been called for. Lea (Assistant Administrator Robert W. Lea) knows more about it than I do. He said November 7 but I have not checked up to see where he got it."

"That is the only point where Ford could be in violation?"

"He could easily be in violation by refusing to receive a delegation of his employees or something of that sort."

"That would be the only overt act?"

"Yes, except that Ford would not have to consent to any collective bargaining."

"Would you care to enlarge on the penalties that will be imposed on Ford if he refuses to turn in this information?"

"There are several penalties but you will have to ask the court when the case comes up; there are fines and an injunctive process."

"Is there a possibility of a jail sentence?"

Johnson ignored the question.

The press conference broke up a moment later, and within an hour unofficial indications came from Detroit that Ford would deliver the trucks on request of N. A. C. C. This was followed closely by a formal statement from the company:

"Mr. Johnson's vocabulary has got him down again. Before assuming the case come up, he should fortify himself with evidence that Henry Ford has refused compliance with government requirements."

"It is an act of injustice for Mr. Johnson to intimate that any refusal has been made of any proper demand on the Ford Motor Company, especially since Mr. Johnson knows that he will turn the case over to the attorney-general's office."

"We suggest a code of fair publicity for Mr. Johnson's interviews."

"I am not interested in your pleasure at the apparent implications that compliance was forthcoming, but he penciled out no more statement; he had no intention of entering into a newspaper discussion with Mr. Cameron. (W. J. Cameron is an assistant to Ford who handles press statements for the company. His name was mentioned in one of the dispatches Johnson saw.)"

"Mr. Edsel Ford told me that the Ford Motor Company would submit to a code that required collective bargaining. I have never said that I have concrete evidence of direct violation of the automobile code by that company."

Will Not Hesitate.

"What I did say was that the moment I did have such evidence I would not hesitate to act."

In late afternoon the company charged Johnson with attempting "a grave injustice upon a law-abiding American industry," and asserted it would not be intimidated by the enemies of independent business, even if it did sign a code. It went on to assert it was complying with the law, that neither signing a code nor flying the Blue Eagle was required by law.

"Johnson is not boycotting us. He is boycotting 5,300 American manufacturers who co-operate with Johnson—a reference to those who help fabricate Ford cars 'out of materials produced under NRA conditions.'"

This was followed by assertion that the company but its dealers make government bids and then "because government departments insist on its being done."

"They have used our products before; their specifications fit, and, besides, the prices usually are very easy on the departments' budgets. There is no money in government bids unless some form of favoritism is practiced, such as is now possible under the NRA."

It went on to say that the Washington dealer's bid on the C. C. G. business was $200,000 below the next, and then:

"Johnson now proposes to charge the American taxpayer a higher price in order to give government business to a concern that pays lower wages than the Ford Motor Company does. More money out of the taxpayer's pocket, less money in the working-man's pocket—that is the way it will work."

Farm Adjustment Leaders Plan Major Changes in Final Draft.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 27.—(AP)—Officials of the farm adjustment administration have decided to scrap some of the major provisions of the NRA retail code in drafting its companion code for the retail food and grocery branch of the distribution industry.

It was disclosed tonight that a new conflict in viewpoints on retail codes has arisen between farm and NRA officials, with the NRA insisting that the code will be placed in the hands of President Roosevelt for decision.

Unless the codes are harmonized the one with a can of shoe polish on one shelf and a box of crabs on another will find the two articles subject to two separate and distinct sales codes at sharp variance with one another in some respects.

Farm officials, who opposed the flat retail markup plan, are now equally opposed to the NRA retail code provision that the selling price of articles to the consumer should include an allowance for actual wages of store labor, to be fixed and published from time to time by the trade authority.

They are ready to prohibit sales of foods and groceries by retailers at less than invoice cost which they said was the essence of an agreement reached recently by Secretary Wallace, George N. Peek, farm administrator, and Hugh S. Johnson, NRA administrator.

Farm officials are concerned over increased prices to consumers, and recognize as one of the chief causes of farm impatience with the recovery program is that prices to farmers have advanced rapidly and prices of commodities farmers sell.

Field generals of the National Farmers' Holiday Association conferred today with NRA officials to discuss the momentum in western Iowa and increased its effectiveness in north and central Wisconsin.

President Milo Reno said the organization's executive board was summoned to meet Sunday to draft farm relief proposals for presentation Monday at a conference of midwestern governors.

Five persons were slightly injured in separate disorders of Wisconsin pickets, and milk was dumped in several places. Holiday leaders said more than 300 cheese factories and creameries had closed in the north and central parts of the state.

Other prominent theater men who will be in attendance are C. C. Pettigrew, of New York, attorney for the Hays organization; M. A. Lightman, president of the Tri-State Theater Owners' Association; Charles W. Piquet, president of the North and South Carolina Theater Owners' Association; and E. J. Kyndall, national president of the Independent Motion Picture Theater Owners of America, of Mississippi.

Thomas E. Orr, of Albertville, Ala., is president of the Southeastern, and Love B. Harrell, of Atlanta, is secretary.

Mr. Rosenblatt was appointed permanent head of the national compliance board of the NRA this week with jurisdiction over amusements.

He will address the convention of the theater owners Monday on the code for amusements. The public significance of his speech will be that of a man who will deal with possible advances in the prices of theater admissions because of code compliance, as well as other details of hours and wages of the theater personnel.

Sunday the theater men of Georgia, Alabama and Florida will hold a get-together and registration in the Hotel Ansley, and Monday and Tuesday the convention meetings will be held.

G. P. HOWARD SR., CITY BUILDER, DIES

George P. Howard Sr., 67, widely known Atlanta and the builder of the first apartment house in Atlanta, died Friday morning at his residence at 770 Penn avenue, N. E., following an illness of ten days. He had been in failing health for some time.

A native of Atlanta, Mr. Howard was a member of a prominent family. His father, R. A. Howard, came to Atlanta as a pioneer from Meriwether county. The elder Mr. Howard was a business partner of the original George Adair in real estate and later founded the Atlanta Transfer Company, out of which was developed the Parcel Delivery Company.

Among the first to perceive a field for apartment houses in Atlanta and the south, Mr. Howard went to New York and studied the principles of apartment house architecture. He returned here and erected the first apartment building at Pine and Peachtree streets, the first building of its kind in the state and probably in the entire south.

The Marlborough was a landmark in Atlanta for many years but was burned several years ago. The Doctors' building now occupies the tract. Mr. Howard took a great interest in the affairs and welfare of Atlanta and was a leading figure in civic projects throughout his life. He at one time represented the old Edgewood district in city council. He gave unstintingly of his time and energy in the upbuilding of the city.

He was well known as a businessman and civic leader and also was prominently identified in the coal industry of Tennessee, where he formerly had large mining interests.

Mr. Howard was married to the former Miss Laura Colquhoun, who survives him. She is the daughter of the late United States Senator and former Governor Alfred H. Colquhoun, and is a sister of Mrs. Preston Arkwright, wife of the president of the Georgia Power Company. Another sister was the late Mrs. W. L. Marshall, wife of the late Major General Marshall, who commanded the engineering corps of the United States army.

In addition to his wife, the prominent Atlanta is survived by two sons, Colquhoun and George Howard Jr.; a sister, Mrs. George Muse, and three grandchildren, Thomas, Anne and Colquhoun Howard Jr., of Atlanta.

He was related to the Wimberly, Carter, Tarver and Newell families, all of whom are widely known in Georgia.

Funeral services will be conducted at 2:30 o'clock this afternoon at the Pine Street chapel in the case of the late George P. Howard Sr. The Rev. Samuel T. Senter, pastor of the First Methodist church, of which he was a member, and the Rev. Richard Orme Flinn will officiate. Burial will be in Oakland cemetery.

Pallbearers will be the following prominent Atlantans: George Street, James McCleary, Dr. George Eubank Jr., Tom Newell, Hubert Duckworth, Joe Duckworth, P. S. Arkwright Jr., W. L. Eve Jr., Dr. Glenville Giddings, Aleck Hopkins, George Muse and Albert A. Whitley Jr.

Plans submitted in Washington when an allocation of federal public works funds for the prison was obtained, would require legislative action, the prison commissioners said, since state laws prohibit prison manufacture of goods to compete in the markets with the products of free labor. Present laws, however, would permit the prisoners to manufacture or grow anything which the state itself could consume.

Commissioner Rainey said there were 25 counties in Georgia which do not have chain gangs, about half of those, he said, never have used prisoners on their roads. Several others have discussed abandonment of their gangs.

Caddy Gets Life Term in Golf Club Killing

RICHMOND, Ky., Oct. 27.—(AP)—A 15-year-old caddy, Lloyd Ray, has been sentenced to spend the rest of his life in prison for having killed Clarence Agee, 19, champion of the Richmond Golf Club here and acting caddy-master.

Testimony brought out at the trial showed that Ray and Agee had prevailed upon the caddy-master to permit the caddy-master to manufacture or grow anything which the state itself could consume.

Palestine Police Kill 11 Arabs in Riot

JAFFA, Palestine, Oct. 27.—(AP)—Eleven men were killed today in a riot of Arabs protesting against Jewish immigration, according to an official statement. A reliable witness estimated the dead at 20.

One of the men killed was a policeman, the rest were Arabs. The communique said also that 20 rioters and two policemen were seriously injured. A large number of arrests was made.

The police, who are British-trained, since Palestine is a British mandate, fired into the mob after a reading of the riot act, when repeated baton charges failed to disperse the rioters. The situation was brought under control without military intervention.

Elsewhere in Palestine, all was reported to be quiet. Jaffa, too, was quiet tonight but, as a precaution, the authorities proclaimed a curfew law, effective at 6 p. m., to keep the streets clear after dark.

DOCTORS GIVE CREOSOTE FOR DANGEROUS COUGHS

For many years our best doctors have prescribed creosote in some form for coughs, colds and bronchitis, knowing how dangerous it is to let them hang on.

Creosolium with creosote and six other highly important medicinal elements, quickly and effectively stops all coughs and colds that otherwise might lead to serious trouble.

Creosolium is powerful in the treatment of all colds and coughs, yet it is absolutely harmless and is pleasant and easy to take.

Our own druggist guarantees Creosolium by refunding your money if you are not relieved after taking Creosolium as directed. Beware the cough or cold that hangs on. Always keep Creosolium on hand for instant use.

NRA RAPS REPORT OF MILL SLACKING

Inactivity Due to Effort To Beat Processing Tax, Wallace Avers.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 27.—(AP)—An assertion by the federal reserve board in its monthly bulletin that industrial activity had slackened noticeably "in industries in which processing taxes or codes have become effective recently," brought quick reverberations today from the NRA and the farm administration.

Reporting a larger volume of business for August and September than in March, in spite of declines for those months as compared with previous months, the bulletin added:

"The decline in industrial activity during the past two months has come, in large measure, in the industries in which expansion has been most rapid. It has also been marked in industries in which processing taxes or codes have become effective recently."

Hugh S. Johnson, the NRA administrator, replied quickly with an assertion that "practically every major industry has been operating under a processing tax or code since August, and that with the exception of the steel industry, every report we have received from major industries shows a definite upward trend."

Secretary Wallace said:

"The situation is that, in efforts to anticipate processing taxes so as to avoid payment while possible, mills in both flour and textile industries enormously increased their activity before wheat and cotton taxes and the increased wage course under NRA went into effect. Then, when the taxes and higher wages became effective, mills slowed down and in some instances blamed the processing taxes for inactivity really due to their efforts to beat the tax."

The federal reserve said the fall in business had not affected employment and wages, both of which had continued to increase although industrial production was dropping.

PART RELIGION PLAYS, IS DR. JONES' SUBJECT

In his sermon Sunday morning at Central Congregational church, Dr. M. Ashby Jones, guest preacher, will seek to answer the question, "What Part Does Religion Really Play in Life?" His topic will be "Where One Lives—A Religion for Today."

"Many people are saying that religion has served a good purpose in the days of men's ignorance, but it has no place in our modern world," Dr. Jones stated. "They are saying that we have moved out of a world of religion into a scientific world. I am going to raise the question whether man is the creature or the creator of his own world. In other words, what part does religion really play in life?"

MARKET, PAINT STORE DAMAGED BY FLAMES

Damage estimated at $2,000 was caused by a blaze which early Friday morning swept through the New City Market, at 85 Broad street, and the Peaches Paint & Roofing Company, at 85 Broad street, following an explosion believed to have been caused by paint leaking on an exposed electric wire, according to police and fire department reports.

Patrolman E. N. Hicks heard the explosion and turned in the alarm. The blast broke the glass show windows of the market and flames spurted out into the street. The fire started in the wall between the two establishments but most of the damage was done to the market, the stock and fixtures being ruined. Four companies from the fire department extinguished the blaze after the whole business block was threatened. Meats and eggs in the market were practically cooked by the heat, it was said.

BARGAIN IN LOVE

BY JANE DIXON

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE.

Henry Hume, Sue's father, takes her along to help Mathilda Fetherstone, his secretary, when he goes to Paris on business. He is closely tied to her work, and Mathilda sees nothing of the brilliant French capital during the two-month stay. Sue is rebellious when they start back for New York. The first evening after the Toulon, Jeffrey Randall saves her from being pitched overboard in a sudden storm but she distrusts this young scion of wealth. Although Mrs. Hume accuses her in the presence of being in Paris with her husband, he asks her that evening, on the moonlit deck, to marry him. Without even taking her hand, he tells her that in seven days he will be 27 years old, and if he is not married then, he loses the Randall fortune to his cousin, Beatrice and Cyril. Sue agrees but only after giving her history. Her father, a lawyer, died when her younger brother Tommy, was 10. Her mother married Herman Fetherstone and Sue has been sending home every cent she earns over living expenses, so her stepfather will not take Tommy out of school and put him to work. Delphine Cragston overtures Mrs. Hume and a private detective named Agard, plotting against Sue but cannot leave Mrs. Hume's motive. This is after Jeff has informed her that Sue is his wife. He tries to tell her that Miss Sue Cragston, Delphine's mother, a social climber, pleading her to secrecy, was keeping her from spreading the news. Mathilda agrees to remain with Sue and Jeff and "see it through." NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

tempted were being made by Mrs. Cragston to secure the verbal signatures of Sue and the count on contracts for land engagements. "I simply can't not lose track of you," she kept repeating to them. "So often friendships made aboard ships end with the journey. It's a shame, really. One meets so few people worth while. And now that I've come to know you, I mean to hold on to you."

"Agree with her," Delphine whispered to Sue. "She'll bound you until you do. You can always cancel."

"But I do want to see you again, you've been so—so regular," Sue said. "Perhaps I can help you, or maybe there is something Jeff can do about the boy in Jersey."

Delphine's hand sought Sue's under the table, pressed it convulsively. "Thanks. You can always reach me through the Arts Club, where I get mail and messages free from the maternal board of censors."

"I don't know where to tell you to reach me," Sue, in confusion. "We haven't decided what we will do."

"Don't bother. The newspapers will supply me with the information. They'll be full of you. And Jeff always gets Jeff through one of his clubs."

With the progress of dinner, the role of the ship increased. The Toulon had plunged straight into a storm and now with the service of coffee and cordials, she was by turns staggering and reeling like a strong man under an insufferable heat. Delphine's mask of cosmetics, a pallor tinged with that tell-tale greenish hue peculiar to victims of the sea's unrest. Suddenly she rose, stood uncertainly, leaned heavily on the edge of the table. "Your arm, Count," she gulped. The count, seated at her right, was on his feet instantly, steadying her. Delphine, circling the table in a flash, grasped the other arm. "Cling to the raft, mother," Delphine advised. Then, to the others at the table who had also risen: "Mother wants me to say good night. See you in the morning." The exit of the Cragstons was more hasty than gallop.

"I hate turning in early on this—the last night," Sue confessed when she and Jeffrey were alone with Mathilda. "Couldn't we watch the storm a while from some sheltered corner?" "I was just going to get my heavy coat," Mathilda said. "I'll bring yours, Sue, if you'll promise not to take any dull of it." "I'll be right back," Sue promised. "I'll be right back," Sue promised. "I'll be right back," Sue promised.

One by one passengers were leaving the grill, some sheepishly, with a show of leisure, others frankly in a great hurry to get to bed. Shortly Mathilda was back with the coat and an expression of puzzled indignation. "What's happened, Matty?" Sue wanted to know at once. "Someone's ruffled our feathers. They're sticking out every which way. 'Someone's ruffled our feathers.' Mathilda corrected. 'We've had visitors in our cabin. They've made a pretty thorough search of everything we have. So far as I could see in a quick check-up, nothing is missing. They must have been in a hurry because when they put our passports back in our bags they got them mixed up, exchanged them. Couldn't have been lost they were after because the money is in my bag, the exact amount I left there. Their money in your purse, too, Sue. It couldn't have been the Kobinor diamond they were looking for because we haven't got it, not one of its smallest pups.' When Jeffrey spoke his voice was thick with wrath. "My guess is that Mrs. Henry Hume or her agent has paid you an informal call. I think they've found what they wanted."

Sue, mystified. "But Jeff, what is there we have to want?" "They were curious about your passport, about the name under which you sailed."

"You mean they suspect we're not married and the passport would confirm their suspicions?" "Probably."

"Oh, Jeff, what will we do? That woman will brand me as an impostor to anyone who will listen. You see how dangerous she is when she dares to steal into my cabin like a sneak-thief."

Jeffrey helped Sue into her coat. "The lady has her pains for her trouble," he said. "She won't dare use whatever she thinks she discovered on the passport because to do so she would admit her guilt."

"But suppose she gets it to your family in some way, to the executor of your estate?"

"By the time she manages to reach them you will be as well as any attempt to damage you will be libelous."

"Henry Hume should have throttled her years ago," Mathilda muttered. Sue, in a sheltered nook, supported by Jeffrey's arm, listening to the sing-song wind, to the swish of rain driving across the decks. Tomorrow this time she would be Mrs. Jeffrey Randall.

New York harbor, flashing and glinting in the moon sunshine, bore the Toulon and proudly on the incoming current. Slowly, majestically, the ship moved into the maw of the river while chattering tugboats clung to her side, nosing her toward the long gray bulk of the pier thrusting its finger out into the green tide.

Sue, standing by the rail, the precious coat that had almost cost her life and that had caught her a husband, over her arm. She ought to thrill to this spectacle of a homecoming, to the magic of a city which wound cloud-fleeces around its towering brows and watched from a million eyes, reflecting the sunlight, the return of its voyagers. Sue ought to be warm and thrilled. Not trembling, with lumps of ice for hands, and body numb with the pier thrusting its finger out into the green tide.

"Matty!" Sue's voice tangled in sudden panic. "If we could turn the ship around, if we could make it put out to sea again—"

"Well, we can't," Mathilda said with a calm from the feeling. "So we'll drop the 'ifs' and get down to facts. We've got a job to do and it's no job for shilly-shallying. Where's Jeffrey?"

"He went inside. He'll be right back."

"Then suppose you take up all those sags in your system and go into your role. You're Mrs. Jeffrey Randall, a woman of consequence, and a happy bride. Jeffrey doesn't seem to have any trouble playing his part. Smile. Get some fun out of the play. Don't let him think you're a weak-kneed sister."

Sue, making an effort to obey Mathilda's orders, Mathilda was right. She had given her word—only a coward would quit at the signal for the rise of the curtain. Adventure! She had always wanted an adventure. Now she had it, was a part of it, the real life heroine in a story-book plot.

"All ready?" Jeffrey came up. The stubborn look at the crown of his head was absolutely beyond control. The small boy in him twinkled out at Sue from behind gray blinds that boded mischief. Jeffrey doesn't seem to have any trouble playing his part. Smile. Get some fun out of the play. Don't let him think you're a weak-kneed sister."

Abstract

STATE BOARD MEMBER, DR. H.W. SHAW, PASSES

Augusta Physician and Civic Leader's Funeral To Be Held Sunday.

AUGUSTA, Ga., Oct. 27.—(AP)—Death today claimed Dr. H. W. Shaw, prominent Augusta physician and civic leader, and member of the state board of control, which has charge of this state's eleemosynary institutions.

Dr. Shaw, who was born in Kershaw, S. C., in 1882, had spent most of his life in Augusta, where he was a prominent figure in medical, civic and political affairs. He was for many years on the staff of the medical college of the University of Georgia here and long was a member of the college board of trustees.

He had served also as a member of the Augusta board of health, and the county health board, before they were merged by legislative action, after which he was a member of the joint board.

Funeral services are to be held here Sunday afternoon.

ALL MEMBERS OF BOARD ASKED TO ATTEND RITES

Members of the state board of control, and superintendents of various state eleemosynary institutions, were requested Friday to attend funeral services in Augusta Sunday for Dr. H. W. Shaw, a board member, who died there yesterday.

The request, it was announced at the board offices here, was made by A. C. Wheeler, of Gainesville, acting chairman of the board. The services are to be at 3:30 Sunday afternoon, at St. James Methodist church, in Augusta.

The board is to hold a meeting here Monday.

NEW MEMBER TO GIVE TALMADGE MAJORITY

Appointment of a successor to Dr. H. W. Shaw, of Augusta, who died early Friday, will give Governor Talmadge a majority on the board of control of eleemosynary institutions on the eve of several important replacements of institution heads in the state. The governor is expected to announce his choice before a meeting of the board is held Monday.

TRUST COMPANY GROUP Only Three Weeks Are Left Of $1,300 Ad-Writing Contest

By JAY ORR JR.

The advertisement contest, Wednesday, the tenth week of the contest, composed one of the best groups entered since the beginning of the contest. It is astonishing to observe the continuous improvement contestants have made over the ads turned in on previous Wednesdays. And before the contest closes the judges are going to be hard put to it to select the final winners.

Only three more weeks of this contest are left in which to win some of the splendid cash prizes amounting to $75 each week. If you have not started writing and entering ads in the contest do so today and cash in on these awards.

Just call at any of the co-operating stores and ask for the official ad-writing paper and it will be given to you free. Write your ads on this paper only. You need not be able to draw or paint. You may clip and paste illustrations on the ads and they may be written in long-hand.

Don't forget that you may write and enter as many advertisements as you wish for as many firms as you wish. The hand put in on Wednesday of each week at Ad-Writing headquarters, 137 Peachtree Arcade. Also remember that there will be 30 sweepstakes prizes totaling $225, so if your ad doesn't win a weekly prize it still has a chance for a prize at the end of the contest. Be sure to watch for the prize winners in tomorrow's Constitution.

In Georgia's Fields and Streams

By H. A. CARTER

DECADENT DAYS OF AUTUMN. Autumn, as we have said before, is a time of scene-shifting in the woods. The teeming life of summer is passing into oblivion. The gauzy-winged dragon-flies that chased summer mosquitoes over basking marshes have gone the way of all dragon-flies. Mosquitoes, unfortunately, seem to have increased since the dragon-flies began to decline (or is it our vivid and prejudiced imagination?). There is beginning to be something of a preliminary blush on the leaves near Atlanta. The newest gorgeous scenery of the year cannot be held over for the back-draw of winter's drama.

Searches at night no longer reward us with the reflection of green-blue eyes. Frogs have all but disappeared; whether the weather will warm up enough to bring them out again is entirely in the hands of the weather bureau, and they seem not to care. I am trying to form a committee of biologists to call on the local branch and ask for six more nights with a high humidity and a temperature better than 65 degrees. Perhaps we will be forced to appeal to congress, but I doubt if even a lobby could get the order through on time.

Whatever else is leaving I can always count on the red-bellied dove. Under the terrifying title of Chrysomys erythrogaster, or some closely related term, these little minnows are found in small streams near Atlanta. You aren't going to believe it, but these fish are more beautifully colored than many of the tropical fish that the fanciers import and pay high prices for. And because they can be had for the trouble of catching them, they are safe from becoming aquarium fish.

The upper part of the body is gray of a neutral shade. It approaches a French gray, but lacks the dominant blue of the tone. There is a stripe of black down the side, followed by a stripe of red, and the belly is definitely yellow. The dealers call them cardinal fish, and sell them at moderately low prices. But since they are not much trouble to keep, the tropical fish will remain more popular.

Seen under a dark bank, against a sandy bottom, the fish are visible only by their fins, which are not transparent, as a respectable fin should be, but are charged with an actual pigment of white. When I first saw them last spring, the first thought that flashed into mind was "sharks," which absurdity exploded immediately and left me to wonder about them, catch them, and find out about them.

If you are troubled about something to look for, keep your weather eye open for the dace, a minnow of pleasing appearance. Autumn is then no longer decadent.

5 Bomb Blasts Mark Cuban Political Strife

HAVANA, Oct. 27.—(AP)—Five bomb explosions, one causing serious damage, threw the turbulent Cuban labor and political situation into further confusion today as disorder and terrorism reigned.

With 10 persons dead after a furious fight at the Jaronu sugar mill, at Camaguey, labor elements renewed their efforts to negotiate a general strike in Cuba. No date, however, has been announced.

The railway strike was spreading with increasing violence. Disorders continued in Havana as well as in the interior.

The newest cloud on the labor horizon was in the newspaper field. El Diario announced it would publish tomorrow despite failure of negotiations with striking employees.

Shots were fired at the Diario building from a passing automobile tonight. Three bystanders were wounded.

15,000 PEOPLE MARCH IN COLUMBUS PARADE

COLUMBUS, Ga., Oct. 27.—(AP)—With the estimated number of participants set at 15,000, Columbus and the counties in the Chattahoochee valley today paraded through the principal streets of this city in support of the national recovery movement.

Many visitors from the surrounding section took part as marchers or watched from the sidewalks. Fort Benning provided two bands and several military units. Many floats were entered in the parade.

Following the parade General Paul B. Malone, commander of the third corps area, and Bryant T. Castellow, congressman from the third Georgia district, addressed a large audience on the courthouse lawn.

200-YEAR-OLD HOME IS DESTROYED BY FIRE

WASHINGTON, Ga., Oct. 27.—The old Grier home, said to have been more than 200 years old and the oldest in this region, on the national highway from Washington to Athens, was destroyed by fire of undetermined origin Wednesday.

In the days of stage coaches this was a popular inn on the Indian trail road from Augusta to Ross' Landing, now Chattanooga. Many notables of the eighteenth century had been entertained in this building, the main body of which was of heavy logs, later covered with weatherboarding.

GOOD-WILL TOUR PLAN IS DELAYED BY HULL

WASHINGTON, Oct. 27.—(AP)—Secretary Hull today canceled his plans for sailing next Saturday on a good-will trip down the west coast of South America, and will leave a week later with the American delegation to the Pan-American conference at Montevideo, Uruguay, sailing down the east coast.

The suddenly rearranged plans will permit the secretary of state to meet and confer with Maxim Litvinoff, soviet commissar for foreign affairs, who left Moscow last night on a recognition mission to the United States.

Hull said his desire to meet Litvinoff was only one of several reasons for reshaping his plans. What he termed a collection of problems remained to be cleared up before he could sail, he added.

U. S. TO USE $10,000,000 TO BUY LOW-GRADE BEEF

WASHINGTON, Oct. 27.—(AP)—Representative Burch, democrat, Virginia, told newspapermen today he was advised by farm administration officials that another $10,000,000 of federal funds would be sent to take low grade beef cattle off the market.

The relief administration already has allocated $10,000,000 to the purchase of heaves of the canners and canteen varieties for distribution to the needy.

NEGRO ELECTROCUTED; ADMITS 19 MURDERS

MILLEDGEVILLE, Ga., Oct. 27.—(AP)—Two negroes were electrocuted at the state prison today for murder of a Pickens county prison guard.

In the death chamber, one of the negroes, Grady Brooks, 19, said he had murdered 19 persons in his lifetime, but was vague about details, except in two cases, one for which he was serving sentence at the time he was to be executed, and the other the one for which he was electrocuted.

The other negro who was electrocuted was George Zuber.

Brooks said that in a break for freedom from the Pickens county convict camp he overpowered one guard and took his gun, and shot and killed the guard, Lee Lindsey, as the latter tried to stop him.

He said that among other murders—for which he said he had no qualms—there was a negro boy named "Howard," slain with a heavy bolt near Manchester in 1929; a negro by the name of "Son," near Gay, Ga., a short time afterward; three negroes on "Seventh street" in Philadelphia in 1927; two white men, slain in the negro section of Philadelphia and left dead in an alley, in the same year; a white man in an automobile "close to the brick yard on the Chattahoochee river near Atlanta"—"I think his name was Marvin Gaze, or something like that—I read in the papers about him dying the next day after I shot him during a holdup"—and the slaying of a negro boy named "Gene" in Atlanta in July, 1931, whose body was put in a box car in Inman yards there.

Brooks said he was serving life for the slaying of Lizzie Irwin in Atlanta in 1931 at the time he shot the guard.

TARZAN THE INVINCIBLE No. 48

As the lion turned toward her, La realized what had happened. The lion had been stalking her, and seeing a leopard about to seize his prey, he had leaped to battle in its defense. She had been saved, but only to fall victim immediately to a more terrible beast.

She wondered why the lion did not charge. She did not know that within that little brain her scent had aroused the memory of another day, when Tarzan had lain bound upon the sacrificial altar of Opar with Jad-bal-ja, the golden lion, standing guard above him.

A woman had come, this same woman, and Tarzan, his master, had told him not to harm her, and she had approached and cut the bonds that secured him. Jad-bal-ja remembered, too, that if he was not to harm her, then nothing must harm her.

By Edgar Rice Burroughs

But all this La of Opar did not know, for she had not yet recognized Jad-bal-ja. She still meant to fight, yet there was something in the lion's attitude she could not understand. He was not charging—he was merely walking toward her!
